I am new to guitar making and am being taught one-to-one by Roy Courtnall, author of Making Master Guitars. I expect it to take 20-30 days in total and my time permits only one or two days a week working on the guitar so I think it will take around six months. It will be walnut back and sides, cedar neck and a lattice spruce top.

The journal entries on this website are from a six month period in 2017/18, when I visited Roy Courtnall for one day a week to learn how to make a classical guitar. Initially, I took my camera so as to document the process for myself, thinking that an image would often act as a better reminder of what I had learned than written notes; after all, Roy had already written a well-regarded book I ...
