A design essentially identical to the 7-course "classical" pattern appeared in Native American culture, the Tohono O'odham people labyrinth which features I'itoi, the "Man in the Maze."The Tonoho O'odham pattern has two distinct differences from the classical: it is radial in design, and the entrance is at the top, where traditional labyrinths have the entrance at the bottom (see below).

~~Labyrinth - Wikipedia~~

The labyrinth is actually made up of two separate lengths of rope. When you get to the endpoint of the first piece, mark that location on the rope and then cut the rope using a hack saw and a miter box. The rope cuts very quickly. We taped the cut end and then used a lighter to fuse the fibers together so it didn't unravel.
