Biblical Prehistory Notes On Genesis

Second, while both of the Babylonian stories claim that humans were created as slaves of the gods, the biblical stories represent a much higher view of the status of humanity in the created order, presenting humanity as the summit of creation (Genesis 1) or the beginning and completion of the creative process (Genesis 2). Third, the biblical stories are humanitarian—providing a theological rationale for rest (Sabbath) and depicting God concerned with the well-being of humanity.
