Let nothing stand in your way. Burn down that house, whatever it is. Choose Life B, and get on with it. Time's a wasting my friends, there's a match being lit somewhere, and we better get ready. Speaking of that, I'd better get going. The house burned down, but the beach is still here, and the pup and I are headed out for a walk.

The house, which I was standing in front of, was burning as fire engulfed it from all sides. There was fire everywhere. The roof was on fire, the doors and the windows were on fire, fire was even coming out of the house through various openings, looking like a fire-breathing dragon was inside the house, puffing fire.

"I fell into a burning ring of fire. I went down, down, down and the flames went higher. And it burned, burned, burned, the ring of fire. The ring of fire."-Johnny Cash. Hello Dear Friends, I know Johnny Cash was writing a song about Hell when he wrote those words, and Hell is not a word often associated with Colorado.
