fruit brandy It all begins with the fruit. But it goes much further than that here at the Dampfwerk. Skin-on-fermentation is what we do here in our distillery, which is a fancy way of saying that we use the whole fruit in our fermentation process.

Fruit Brandy — Dampfwerk Distilling

For starters, you should know that all brandy is made from fruit. It is distilled from fermented fruit juice, more commonly known as wine. When fruit other than grapes is used—apples, plums, cherry, pear, etc.—the type of fruit used is listed on the bottle. Calvados is an exception to this rule—more on this category later.

Fruit spirit (or fruit brandy) is a distilled beverage produced from mash, juice, wine or residues of edible fruits. The term covers a broad class of spirits produced across the world, and typically excludes beverages made from grapes, which are referred to as plain brandy (when made from distillation from wine) or pomace brandy (when made directly from grape pomace).

Fruit brandy - Wikipedia

The fruit is pressed it to juice, then fermented to a wine or hard cider. After fermentation, the fruit wine is then distilled in small batches in our copper pot stills, and subsequently aged in white-oak casks for a period between one and four years, depending on the individual fruit. A little bit about brandy for those who are unfamiliar: Brandy is not supposed to be sweet. If it has residual or added sugar, it would technically be classified as a liqueur, not a brandy.

Catoctin Creek® - Fruit Brandy

All spirits distilled from fermented fruit other than grapes is a fruit brandy. More specifically, most fruit brandy derives from distilled fruit wine. Berries, on the other hand, are a special case because they do not contain enough sugar to make a wine with enough alcohol to be distilled into a proper fruit brandy.

Distilling consultant Hubert Germain-Robin, co-founder of the eponymous northern California distillery and author of The Maturation of Distilled Spirits, recently guided a group of aspiring apple brandy makers who met daily at Tuthilltown Spirits in Gardiner, New York. The area, now home to numerous cider makers, was fitting: Orange County, just south of the little Hudson Valley town, once produced more apple brandy than any other county in the nation.
