Doing feminist research in political and social science ...

The commencement of feminist research is emerging from the viewpoint that values women's experience, needs, and perception of the social world. Feminist research also aims at bringing transformation and phasing out the gender asymmetry in the world. The deliberate discrimination of women at household level which results in a higher level of unhappiness and morbidity among women can be easily understood and unpacked from the perspective feminist lens. This research is prerequisite and ...

Understanding Feminist Research Methodology in Social ...

Feminism is, therefore, a doctrine which is concerned with emancipation of women. But broadly speaking the concept embraces other areas of women's life such as their development, role in political, social, cultural and economic affairs. It also talks about women's rights and freedom. The social and political structure have been built up in such a manner that women are not always at par with men in various affairs of society and this has practically given birth to a male-dominated society.
