Storyline: White Night (The Dresden Files #9) This time, when Harry Dresden gets a call from Murphy, it's off the record, because she has been demoted, things in SI are politically shaky, and the police have already declared a suicide. Once Harry gets a good look, though, the suicide is clearly a murder with magical intent.

Experience the magical phenomenon of White nights. White nights are bright nights. This magical phenomenon is created by the sun reflecting off atmospheric particles. Head north for an illuminating experience. In the summer of 1908, an asteroid or comet exploded in the atmosphere above Tunguska in Siberia, producing a particularly bright glow at night for several weeks in Sweden.
