Hotel Chic At Home Inspired

Her latest book, Hotel Chic At Home, is a collection 350 images taken from hotels across the globe, both well known and boutique. The book is divided into 8 sections, starting with Bedrooms and ending with Outdoor Spaces, offering a glimpse of design themes and features, especially ones that can practically be incorporated or adapted into our own homes, especially touches a person might not have been daring enough to consider; as in dark walls, textile highlights, and dynamic patterns.

A monochromatic scheme is often used in hotel rooms to set a quiet, sophisticated tone. To create that at home, pick one primary color and one related coordinating color. Try a mushroom hue on the wall, or warm up a white palette with wood tones and an organic, earthy scheme like designer Chayse Dacoda did in this bedroom.
