Let a thousand flowers bloom is a common misquotation of Chairman Mao Zedong's "Let a hundred flowers blossom". This slogan was used during the period of approximately six weeks in the summer of 1957 when the Chinese intelligentsia were invited to criticize the political system then obtaining in Communist China.

'Let a thousand flowers bloom' - meaning and origin.

Let a Thousand Flowers Bloom is a very large, vertically orientated oil painting on a wooden panel backed by a white canvas, which is thickly covered in many areas by wooden sticks and dried red roses and depicts a grey statue of Mao Zedong (1893–1976), the first leader of the People's Republic of China. The image of Mao fills the central area of the work and is much larger than life size.

The Hundred Flowers Campaign, also termed the Hundred Flowers Movement, was a period from 1956 to 1957 in the People's Republic of China during which the Communist Party of China encouraged citizens to express openly their opinions of the communist regime. Following the failure of the campaign, CPC Chairman Mao Zedong conducted an ideological crack down on those who criticized the regime, which continued through 1959. Observers differ as to whether Mao was genuinely surprised by the extent and s
