Literary journalism is nonfiction prose that transcends “who, what, where, and when” to give a more detailed, richer, and vivid picture of real events. It combines an immersive approach to reporting with the aims and techniques of fiction. Although this type of writing has roots in antiquity (i.e., Thucydides’s The Peloponnesian War), contemporary practitioners include Tom Wolfe, Joan Didion, John McPhee, and Gay Talese.

Literary journalism is nonfiction prose that transcends the limits of daily news. While all reporting offers complex challenges to the practitioner, by “literary journalism” we mean a kind of writing that goes beyond “who, what, where and when” to give a more detailed, richer, more vivid picture of real events.
