London, 1802 Poem Summary and Analysis | LitCharts
A summary of a classic Wordsworth sonnet. 'Milton! thou shouldst be living at this hour'. With this opening line, William Wordsworth (1770-1850) begins one of his most famous sonnets. Although he's best-known in the popular consciousness as the poet who praised daffodils and wandered lonely as a cloud, 'London, 1802' shows a Wordsworth who is very critical of England and its people, and looking back nostalgically to a happier time in English (literary) history.

Wordsworth's Poetry: "London, 1802" | SparkNotes
William Wordsworth (1770-1850) produced some of the greatest English poems of the late 1700s and early 1800s. In contrast to the decorum of much 18th-century verse, he wanted to relate "situations from common life" in "language really used by men," embodying "the spontaneous overflow of feelings...recollected in tranquility" (preface to Lyrical Ballads [1802]).

"The World Is Too Much with Us" is a sonnet by the English Romantic poet William Wordsworth. In it, Wordsworth criticises the world of the First Industrial Revolution for being absorbed in materialism and distancing itself from nature. Composed circa 1802, the poem was first published in Poems, in Two Volumes (1807). Like most Italian sonnets, its 14 lines are written in iambic pentameter
