Anthropology, archaeology, art and architecture are all ways of making, and all are dedicated to exploring the conditions and potentials of human life. In this exciting book, Tim Ingold ties the four disciplines together in a way that has never been attempted before. In a radical departure from conventional studies that treat art and architecture as compendia of objects for analysis, Ingold proposes an anthropology and archaeology not of but with art and architecture.

In a summary of research on archaeology and art, Raymond Corbey, Robert Layton, and Jeremy Tanner argue that archaeologists concerned with past societies have to confront the disjunction between what “art” means in the contemporary world and the phenomena we seek to understand in the past . They trace the distinction between art and artifact, fundamental to some distinction of art history and archaeology, to nineteenth-century discourses of distinction in skill, sensibility, and creativity.

Review of Tim Ingold's 'Making: Anthropology, Archaeology ...

The anthropology of art studies and analyses the wide range of material objects produced by people around the world. These are considered not merely as aesthetic objects but are understood to play a wider role in people's lives, for instance in their beliefs and rituals. The materials studied include sculpture, masks, paintings, textiles, baskets, pots, weapons, and the human body itself.
