New Suburbanists seek to establish an alternative between a dichotomy of the centripedal city and centrifugal suburb, by features such as rear-loading garages and walking-focused landscaping. The design strategy for New Suburbanism differs from the traditional postwar suburban development.

New SubUrbanisms | Taylor & Francis Group
In New SubUrbanisms, Judith De Jong explains the on-going "flattening" of the American Metropolis, as suburbs are becoming more like their central cities – and cities more like their suburbs through significant changes in spatial and formal practice as well as demographic and cultural changes. These revisionist practices are exemplified in the emergence of hybrid sub/urban conditions such as ...

New SubUrbanisms - 1st Edition - Judith K De Jong ...
New Suburbanism includes many of the New Urbanism ideals while incorporating amenities that the average resident would expect in a suburban landscape; amenities such as movie theaters, restaurants, supermarkets, cutting edge healthcare, vet services and specialty shops. Denser, mixed housing (single-family homes, narrow lot homes, attached townhouses and rental apartments) makes for a broader ...

New Suburbanism Offers An Alternative to Smart Growth. The concept of New Suburbanism is not original, but it also isn't well established. This makes it malleable, or, at least, this leaves room for a fresh interpretation of its meaning. First expressed in 2005 by urban geographer Joel Kotkin, New Suburbanism is a complement to New Urbanism, a movement initially devoted to the twin ...

The central city was conventionally portrayed as the old, dying locus of high culture and employment, demographic diversity, density, and verticality, while peripheral areas were stereotyped as new, growing residential enclaves of mass culture (ergo, cultural vacuity), homogeneity, dispersion, and horizontality. This polarization has proven stubbornly resistant to revision.
