~~Service Repair Manual~~
The success of the Indy during the winter of ' 79 was proof enough for Polaris Management to give the go-ahead for a limited production run. To qualify for stock racing, approximately 1000 TX-L Indys were built. The major change to the design to bring it to production was to shorten the PTO end of the crank 10mm to fit in the new belly pan.

While there had been other snowmobiles to previously be fitted with an independent front suspension, it was the 1980 Polaris TXL INDY that truly brought IFS to the masses and made the technology mainstream, forcing the other manufacturers to develop their own IFS systems or be left out in the cold.
