Rules and Routines have a big role to play as positive behaviour management strategies in schools and classrooms as well as preparing the children for adulthood. If used correctly they will save time and energy, resulting in less stressors effecting the teacher allowing him/her to teach more productively and confidently in a well organised and controlled classroom environment.

Rules And Routines: Positive Behaviour Management Strategies

It is a good idea to display the class rules so children are reminded of them. Sometimes these are called a class charter or class treaty which everyone signs to agree with. We have editable class rules posters with suggested rules such as: Follow instructions from adults; Take care of each other; Concentrate and listen; Respect ourselves and others

Pay attention not just to the letters and their order, but also to the shape the word makes on the page. Say it aloud. Say the word both as you would usually say it, and then again enunciating any silent letters, e.g. Wed – nes – day. Cover the word with a piece of paper or your hand. Write the word down from memory.
