The Sculptors of Mapungubwe by Zakes Mda

Ageless and contemporary, deceptive in its simplicity and mythical in its scope, The Sculptors of Mapungubwe encompasses all we know of love, envy, and the artist's primal power to forge art from nature and nature into art. Mda's newest novel will only strengthen his international reputation as one of the most trenchant voices of South Africa.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe, Mda

In the timeless kingdom of Mapungubwe, the royal sculptor had two sons, Chata and Rendani. As they grew, so grew their rivalry—and their extraordinary talents. But while Rendani became a master carver of the animals that run in the wild hills and lush valleys of the land, Chata learned to carve fantastic beings from his dreams, creatures never before seen on the Earth.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe is not a strictly historical novel -- Mda's concerns and interests are as much in the characters, and specifically Rendani and Chata's roles as artists -- but Mda does provide an interesting introduction to this generally thriving but also fragile kingdom. Part of the global marketplace of the time, it attracted traders from far away (mainly because of the local gold, but also, more problematically, because of foreign interest in rhino horns).
