Subtle and rhythmic, the beat is ideal for nighttime reading, "It's time for bed, little sheep, little sheep, the whole wide world is going to sleep." The book concludes with a Mommy tucking a toddler into bed, "The stars on high are shining bright, sweet dreams, my darling, sleep well, good night!" This is a precious bedtime book.

At the end of one episode, "A Peaceful Day", when Zebedee called his catchphrase of "Time for bed.", Florence asked "Already?", and Zebedee replied that "It's nearly time for the news, and you've had enough magic for one day." The news was broadcast just after The Magic Roundabout.

"Time For Bed", illustrated by Jane Dyer, is a special book I imagine parents reading to infants, toddlers, and beyond; a warm part of tucking-in that families would cherish. It is brief enough to always fit in; a thematic, soothing tradition.

I enjoyed that "Time for Bed" was dark and full of black humor and real life. I enjoyed that it was in no way a love story, not a typical relationship between the main heroes. I enjoyed the easy narration of the main hero, his dark thoughts and jokes and I think that this book is definitely a fine debut!

Becoming a parent is an incredible, exciting, exhausting adventure. Time for Bed Baby celebrates the bond between parent and child and the simple pleasures of the bedtime ritual whilst also recognising the need for mums to take time out to look after themselves. "This is your mobile and this is your light and I am your mummy, kissing you goodnight."
