Tuhami is an illiterate Moroccan tilemaker who believes himself married to a camel-footed she-demon. A master of magic and a superb story-teller, Tuhami lives in a dank, windowless hovel near the kiln where he works.

Tuhami: Portrait of a Moroccan - Crapanzano, Vincent

Tuhami was born in the late 1920s or early '30s in a desolate village near Sidi Kacem on the great arid wheat plains of northern Morocco. Like most Moroccans, he knew little of his family's past; there were no heroes, no brigands, saints, or warriors, who rose out of the monotony of centuries of tilling the same soil.

Tuhami: Portrait of a Moroccan by Vincent Crapanzano

Tuhami is written as a novel/case study, but is so well crafted that it flows without it feeling overly scientific. The beginning of the book is a fantastic view of Moroccan culture and mysticism. I recognize that if I did not live in Morocco i would not appreciate much of the depth of the explanations.

Tuhami: Portrait of a Moroccan - Vincent Crapanzano

Reflection on Vincent Crapanzano's work "Tuhami: Portrait of a Moroccan". In a classic cultural anthropological text titled Tuhami: Portrait of a Moroccan, by Professor Vincent Crapanzano embarks on a fascinating tale of she demons, and an attempt to discover new ways of writing ethnography. My initial reaction to his work was mere fascination by Tuhami's story, but the more you peel away at Crapanzano's fantastic prose and dig beneath the surface of the story, another story about ...
